Lisbon Forum 2014 discusses the role of the electoral process in the consolidation of democracy

More than 200 participants, coming from around 50 countries, attended the 2014 edition of the Lisbon Forum, which was devoted to the key issue of “Electoral process and democratic consolidation in the countries of the southern Mediterranean” (Ismaili Centre, Lisbon, 15-16 September 2014). Organised by the North-South Centre of the Council of Europe in the framework of the South Programme, and in cooperation with the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance (IDEA), the Aga Khan Development Network and the Anna Lindh Foundation, the Forum gathered together international experts on elections, representatives of international organisations including, among others, the CoE, the EU, the League of Arab States and the Organisation of American States, and members of Governments, Parliaments, local and regional authorities and civil society from European, Southern Mediterranean and other countries.

The Forum was opened by Mr Fayçal Gouiaa, Tunisian Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and President of the Lisbon Forum 2014, and by the Secretary General of the Council of Europe, Mr Thorbjørn Jagland.

The round tables, workshops and debates which took place allowed the participants to exchange on key issues related to the electoral process, such as the financing of political parties and electoral campaigns, the issue of ethics in the electoral process, the electoral law and electoral bodies/administration, the role of candidates and parties in the electoral campaign, the observation of elections by civil society organisations, the participation of women in the electoral process and the role played by media during elections.

Conclusions and recommendations addressed to all stakeholders were formulated. They highlighted, in particular, the need for a stable and inclusive electoral law, whose funding principles are included in the Constitution, and for a regulatory framework which ensures the integrity, independence and transparency of the electoral administration.

Furthermore, international standards on the principles of equity and transparency, on the financing of parties and electoral campaigns and on the participation of minorities as well as fundamental rights such as the access to vote and to information and the equality of chances should be reflected in an appropriate legislative framework, which also includes sanctioning measures.

Political parties should ensure internal democracy and equality of chances to all its members. The discussions underlined also the importance of new and traditional media to ensure an objective and impartial information.

The recommendations addressed also the need for an inclusive electoral process: in this respect, citizens and, in particular, women’s participation should be encouraged. The observation of elections by civil society was recognised as another important tool to strengthen democracy. More generally, the Forum recalled the need for a responsible and independent civil society, in order to support the reforms and transitions’ processes in southern Mediterranean countries.

In order to ensure a concrete implementation of the recommendations formulated during the Forum, Moroccan and Tunisian authorities expressed their availability to host follow-up meetings.

Prevention of torture: seminars on the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture in Tunisia (4-5 September) and Morocco (8-9 September)

Two information seminars on the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT) of the Council of Europe (CoE) took place in Tunis (4-5 September), in co-operation with the Ministry of Justice, Human Rights and Transitional Justice, and Rabat (8-9 September), in co-operation with the National Human Rights Council (CNHD). The seminars – organised within the framework of the South Programme – provided the opportunity to present the work of the CPT, and to discuss core issues relating to the prevention of torture in Tunisia and Morocco.

The two CPT seminars were attended by representatives of public institutions, international organisations, members of parliament, civil society associations, media, as well as prominent experts of the CPT. The conferences presented the standards of work of the CPT and focused on the specificities of the Tunisian and Moroccan cases. More specifically, the seminars dealt with issues concerning the current situation of torture prevention in both countries such as the quality of prisons, the medical treatment of prisoners, the police stations, and the issue of forced psychiatric treatments.

The debates which stemmed from the discussion paved the way for the formulation of recommendations, which will be of precious value for the thorough implementation of Article 23 of the new Tunisian Constitution – which prohibits the use of torture – and of the law establishing the Instance nationale pour la prévention de la torture, and for the setting-up of a national preventive mechanism against torture in Morocco.

Visit to Strasbourg of the President of the Tunisian Authority for Audiovisual Communication (HAICA) (11-12 September 2014)

On 11-12 September 2014, the President of the Tunisian High Independent Authority for the Audiovisual Communication (HAICA, Haute Autorité Independante de la Communication Audiovisuelle) paid a working visit to the CoE. This visit allowed for a better understanding of the work and activities of the European Audiovisual Observatory as well as of several CoE bodies and institutions working in fields related to HAICA mandate.

Furthermore, the meetings held on this occasion allowed for an exchange of views on the main challenges that the HAICA will face in the months to come – in particular, the media coverage and regulation of Tunisian electoral campaign and elections – and of the support that the CoE can provide in this respect.

This event was organised in the framework of South Programme’s activities aimed at supporting the setting-up and effective functioning of new bodies and independent authorities in Southern Mediterranean countries, as well as at promoting the creation of a common legal space with Europe, through the accession to relevant CoE Conventions and partial agreements.

The results of MedSPAD Tunisia’s survey are now available

The MEDNET network of the Pompidou Group (Co-operation Group to Combat Drug Abuse and Illicit Trafficking in Drugs) has published the results of the first MedSPAD (Mediterranean School Survey Project on Alcohol and Other Drugs) survey in Tunisia. This survey has been conducted with the financial support of the South Programme.

The survey consisted of a cross-national study conducted over the first two weeks of November 2013 with a sample of at least 5,000 teenagers. This study follows a preliminary survey conducted in Tunis in February 2013 and responds to the Tunisian government’s wish to establish an information system allowing for a regular assessment of the real dimension of drugs use and addiction, as well as of the efficiency of preventive measures.

This survey permitted to shed light on the tendencies of drug use (alcohol, tobacco and other substances) among educated teenagers between the age of 15 and 17, and to study some related factors (level of knowledge and attitudes towards the use of drugs, socio-economic context of families, educational profile, level of mental, social and behavioural health). The results of the survey will allow a better fine-tuning of the Tunisian strategy of prevention and contrast of addictions.

Moreover, the South Programme has also supported the realisation of a MedSPAD survey in Morocco, whose results will be available soon.

Trainings against corruption in Tunisia (Tunis, 23-25 September)

Two trainings were organised in Tunis in September, within the framework of the South Programme’s activities intended to promote good governance and the fight against corruption.

A first training aimed at detecting the risks of corruption in the phase of preparation and improvement of legislative acts was held on 23 and 24 September. Among other themes, the discussion dealt with the phrasing, the competences and the procedures to be developed in order to minimise the risks of corruption in the preparation of laws. Furthermore, the training presented a comparison between remarkable approaches used in some countries to better detect the risks of corruption. Some practical cases were also discussed in working groups.

A second training focusing on the basic concepts of corruption followed on 24 and 25 September. This training – addressed to lawyers and officials of the judiciary – tackled issues regarding the detection of corruption and conflicts of interest. During the training, the definitions, causes and consequences of corruption – as well as the definitions and the mechanisms for prevention of corruption – were presented. Moreover, some specific anti-corruption tools developed in other countries – and namely in Belgium, where the Code of Ethics for lawyers has been recently updated – were discussed.

Finally, the training touched upon the issue of the financing of political parties and electoral campaigns.

Participation of a Tunisian delegation in the meeting of the CEPEJ working group on quality of justice (25-26 September)

A Tunisian delegation attended the 16th meeting of the European Commission for the Efficiency of Justice (CEPEJ) working group on quality of justice (GT-QUAL) (Strasbourg, 25 and 26 September 2014). The meeting focused on a number of issues, stretching from the organisation and the accessibility of court premises to the role of experts in the quality of judicial systems.

Under the South Programme, the CEPEJ continues its work with Morocco and Tunisia. The working programme for the months to come foresees, among other things, a mission of CEPEJ experts to Tunisia and Morocco, training activities in both countries and the participation of Moroccan and Tunisian delegations in CEPEJ’s plenary session and working groups.

The European Commission for the Efficiency of Justice (CEPEJ)

The European Commission for the Efficiency of Justice (CEPEJ) was established on 18 September 2002 with the ultimate goal of improving the functioning and the efficiency of justice in the CoE member states. The creation of the CEPEJ resulted also from the Council of Europe’s intention to stimulate and spread a precise knowledge of judicial systems among its member states and beyond.

The CEPEJ – which is composed by experts appointed by all the 47 member states – carries out analyses and assessments of judicial systems in order to identify solutions to improve the quality of justice, enable a better implementation of CoE standards as well as to ameliorate Court performances and judicial time management.

In order to accomplish its numerous tasks, the CEPEJ prepares benchmarks, collects and analyses data, defines instruments of measure and means of evaluation, adopts documents (reports, advices, guidelines, action plans, etc), develops contacts with qualified personalities, non-governmental organisations, research institutes and information centres, organises hearings, and promotes networks of legal professionals.

Within the framework of the South Programme, the CEPEJ has provided Morocco and Tunisia with precious support in improving the efficiency and quality of their judicial systems. On the basis of the assessment of the Moroccan and Tunisian judicial systems, specific co-operation programmes were designed for selected Moroccan and Tunisian pilot Courts, in order to improve Court performance and the quality of justice. Through training for trainers’ activities and the regular participation of Moroccan and Tunisian counterparts became familiar with CEPEJ methodologies and benefitted from exchanges of good practices with experts from CoE member States. In this respect, the granting of CEPEJ Observer Status to Morocco in May 2013 represented a major advance. Finally, CEPEJ is also putting its expertise at the disposal of the authorities with a view to adapting legislation on the judicial system.

Outside the South Programme, CEPEJ collaborates also with Jordan in the framework of a Programme entitled “Support to the Jordanian authorities in improving the quality and efficiency of the Jordanian justice system”, funded by the European Union and implemented by the Council of Europe.
